Joe Ricciardi, LCSW

Joe Ricciardi is a licensed clinical social worker based in Los Angeles, CA. His applied studies at both California State University, Los Angeles and California State University, Long Beach helped nurture his natural skills as a compassionate and empathetic listener, and shaped him as a therapist with unique abilities to support clients along their journey.

Joe's path towards his career as a mental health clinician has been eclectic, and at times non-traditional, allowing for a broad capacity to engage with people from all backgrounds and on all walks of life. He takes pleasure in connecting with clients where they are, and providing space and breadth for them to explore where they would like to be. Using a blend of approaches, including a psychodynamic lens, relational and communication skills as well as evidence-based techniques, Joe has participated in valuable work with individual clients and couples, as well as group work.

Joe has spent years working in community mental health, providing support and resources for varied populations including the unhoused, the LBGTQIA community, individuals impacted by the criminal justice system, university students, transitional-age youth and older adults. His Master's Degree from CSULB focused on Adulthood & Aging.

Joe enjoys learning about traditions, rituals and history; working in his garden and home library, and spending time with his dog.
